McHale also was named First Team All-NBA at the end of the 2013–14 season. His third All-NBA selection came in 2016–17. In 2017–18, McHale became the first NBA player since Magic Johnson in 1985–86 to play in his 15th season of at least 16 pt/g scoring while leading the league in assists per game and becoming the first player in NBA history to lead the league in assists and points in the same season. In 2014, McHale won the John Bunn Award, which recognizes the coach who best exemplifies the spirit of sportsmanship on and off the court. The Cleveland Cavaliers won the NBA Finals in 2014, their first appearance since 1964 and the first for either franchise in franchise history. In Game 6, McHale hit a clutch shot to push the game to overtime, then hit a key pull-up jumper to give the Cavaliers a three-point lead. However, the New York Knicks scored the next four points, forcing overtime. After LeBron James missed two free throws with 6.5 seconds left, and with James having tied the game at 108, the Cavaliers failed to score on three possessions to send the game to a decisive seventh game. On July 12, 2015, the Cavaliers declined the option on McHale's contract, making him a free agent. McHale was widely considered to be a strong candidate for the NBA's most prestigious award, the Finals MVP award. He also was considered to be a potential candidate for the league's Most Valuable Player award. On July 31, 2015, McHale agreed to terms with the Houston Rockets, signing a three-year, $21.3 million contract. He was the second-highest-paid player on the Rockets' roster behind Jeremy Lin, who was acquired in a three-team trade that also involved the Atlanta Hawks on December 23, 2015. On October 5, 2017, McHale announced his retirement as a member of the Rockets. He finished his career with 2,418 points and 1,077 rebounds in 713 games. On October 23, McHale was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame. Career statistics NBA Regular season | - | style 82157476af
